He failed to get quite there because of the giving out of his gasoline supply. He tailed about eighteen miles in all.

The crowd that watched the "Arrow's" flight was the largest in the history of Chutes Park. It was carefully estimated that 30,000 persons were congregated within the grounds at the corner of Pico street and Stanford avenue, and after bringing his machine to a point a few yards from the earth's surface, he tied it to a telephone pole with the long guide rop which hangs beneath, clambered down from his perch, stationed a lot of boys to watch, and went off to guide capt. Baldwin to his precious aerial possession.

Knabenshue was in the air about an hour and a half, rising to a maximum that tide of 4000 feet. His turn to come back to ifte Chutes was made directly over Stoto street, in the northeastern part, of Boyle Heights. At this place he was not more than 200 feet above the carth's surface, and his long voyage on the return was necessarily made in the very teeth of the wind. The crowd that watched the "Arbys"s" flight was the largest in the istory of Chutes Park. It was careally estimated that 30,000 persons were ongregated within the grounds at the me of its ascension Uncounted thousands strained their necks without he gates to catch a first glimpse of an eairship's rotund yellow body. There were 27,217 paid admissions, counting he double attraction of Ellery's band and Baldwin's invention, and the crowd hat watched the "Arrow's" trial also paid eager attention to the band, while those who came to see Ferulio seemed yoully attracted by the atmospheric reaft.

The scheduled hour was 2:30 o'clock, but as usual, delays, occurred at the last moment, and 3 o'clock came and found the craft still upon the ground. The rudder, a big rectangle of white canvas stretched upon a bamboo framewas hung upon its pinions at the final moment, and two simple strings were run from it along the bars beneath the balloon for the aeronaut to steer by.

After the crowd had become impapient enough to "root" and guy, the balloon was carried to a pair of high "suw horses," that stood a little to the south, of Morley's old home plate. Here the sand bags were unloosed, and several men held the swaying craft down with their hands. A part of the starting gear was missing at the last minute, and Baldwin hurried a man off to the barn to find it. Knabenshua, very boyish and entirely unaffected, jumped upon a cracker box and stepped from it to the lower bar of the airship frame, trying the various paris of the gear, to see if all worked properly. Then the fellow came back from the barn on a trot. Baldwin gave his little automobile motor a twist or two, and with a muffled "bang," the engine started the propeller on its regular revolution. "Catch my coat, brother," said Knagrand stand on Morley's ball ground. Half a dozen policemen could not keep the curious within bounds, and Baldwin, Knabenshue and their assistants trod upon or stumbled over many inquisitive ones during their final hurried preparations. The gas bag was filled with hydrogen, shining yellow and semi-transparent in the afternoon sunlight. The body of the airship, or the framework-to speak precisely—was weighted down with numerous small sandoags, and two or three helpers sat upon projecting bars to add firmness.

The scheduled hour was 2.20 o'clock.

RICH GOLD STRIKE.

Los Angeles Capitalists Find Ore in Arizona That Runs Into Fancy Figures.

Gen. Edward Bouton has fust received a report from Superintendent Watson of the White Eagle Mining Company, operating in Yuma county. Ariz., reciting the facts of a splendid new strike of gold ore in the War Eagle ledge, near Empire Flats. A sample sack was assayed in Los Angeles yesterday, giving returns of $1657.32 in gold to the ton.

Watson writes that the ledge is seven feet wide and will average $150 per ton, while a streak varying from eight to thirty inches in width gives returns up in the thousands.

The White Eagle Company was recently formed by Gen. Bouton, W. L. Valentine and James H. Watson for the purpose of developing the large acreage owned by these gentlemen on the Colorado River below the Needles. Many rich strikes have been reported from this section since active work was begun, but this latest fine celipses all previous ones.

"This season leads to a study of the conditions of the carthly life of Jesus. Concerning this life, this text states that it was prekistent, that Jesus had conscious life before His earthly advent and that His condition is defined by the word rich. The finite dare not speculate about the unrevealed things of our God, but scripture informs us that creative energy belonged to this Christ, that all things were made by Him; that He had great glory with the Father before the world was; and that He had supreme fellowship with God before the creation of this world.

"Prompted by divine grace and for our sake, for the sake of sinning man, Christ gave up this exalted condition in realms celestial and took upon Himself the nature and limitations of this earthly life and was in a condition of earthly poverty. The limitations which His earthly life brought to Him were many. The divine could not be fully expressed and revealed in the human, and His life under these limitations must have been even to Him of great poverty as compared with His pre-existent life. He was poverty-stricken financially. He was born of very poor arentage. Tradition says a widowed mother with fatherless children were dependent upon the labors of Jesus, and He made toll honorable by following one of the humblest vocations of the age in which He lived. He was dependent upon the offerings of His friends during His public ministry for His daily bread. He had not where to Christmas yesterday. There was a bouquet of flowers for every one; there were cries of merry, greeting there were cries of merry, greeting there were cries of merry, greeting there its fragrant lusciousness; there are stories and songs and laughter. Tet for many it was the last Christmas on earth.

The white table was stretched in the leng dining-room of the main building, and gathered about it were the convairant was contagious for all that, and weeks and months in an effort to get well and strong once again, men and women who had to be carried in from the charity wards, and those who make up the wards for incurables. Into the bright dining-room they went, the old and the young, the weak and strong. Many of the churches had contributed to the feast, and every church in Los Angeles had sent flowers. An old man sat at one end of the table. He was worn with the rawages of consumption. For years he has been dying a little at a time. A few years more, perhaps a few weeks, only, for him to live. #### REMOVAL PROJECTED

Important Change of Location Soon to Take Place.

People who have watched the progress of the immense 15 per cent discount sale of the Los Angeles Furniture Co. incident to its coming removal from its present location at 225-229 South Broadway to the new building on the West side of Spring Street, near Sixth, will be interested to learn that in a few weeks more the removal will be an accomplished fact.

Meanwhile the reduction upon every piece of furniture, all curtains, draperies and upholstery stuffs in the store will be continued. Sales have already been enormous. But the stock of such an establishment is of necessity large, and wide selections in any particular line of goods are still possible.

That the public appreciate the difference between the ordinary "sale" and this important movement has been amply evidenced. The high character of the stocks of this Company, the wide selections of fine furniture offered, and the genuine saving afforded, places the movement in a class by itself, and marks an epoch in the furniture business of Los Angeles.

This opportunity of furnishing a home economically and well has never been equaled-probably will not be approached in years to come. It will not be open much longer. Those who desire to take advantage of it should do so without delay.

WE WISH YOU

A Merry Christmas

IDEBRAND BACKING UP. The determination of E. E. Smathers sy-horse game and go to the runners, will be greeted with pleasure by all those in any way interested in running horses. Smathers is to be welcomed because he is no seiling plater and will certainly have a big stable of good ones. He has started out well by buying Sam Hiddreth's horses, and in this connection it is learned that Hildreth's purchases of young horses at the recent big sales in the East were for Smathers, and not for himself. This string consists of fifty-one, of which thirty-nine are yearlings. They are now at Lexington and will be trained for the two-year-old races next spring. Owing to Hildreth's row with Madden, Sam will not handle the bulk of the horses as a trainer, but Smathers thinks so much of his ability that the stable will be split and Hildreth giver the western end of it to manage and will take charge of the entire stable if he and Madden can be brought together. last year.

The fellow who signs himself "The Irresponsible One" to the race horse gossip he publishes in an eastern pater, thinks that Tod Sloan is about the most ill-advised little nonenity on the footstool today. It is probably a matter of real indifference to anyone whether or not the boy gets back to riding, for the history of the world has shown and does show that there are always plenty of others in every line of business. Whatever the outcome may be of his dispute with the French Jockey Club or the racing powers in France, it is likely that his set-down by that organization will take some of the swelling out of his head, for he has the reputation of being very much swelled up.

much swelled up.

When men sleep with the horses, pet them, feed them and watch them galliep can go into a betting ring and kee money on them, it should strike the average beholder that there is a lot more honesty about the racing game than is generally supposed. The penalties for crookedness are really too severe for bad sciors to take chances on, and racing as conducted at present on first-class tracks is as honest as any other sport or business. The reason why so many people lose playing the races is because no matter what horse they pick to win, the bookmaker has every other horse in the race to run for him and this percentage in favor of the bookmaker always wins for him in the long run.

CITY OF MEXICO, Dec. 25.—News from Guatemala shows that there is much feeling on the part of the British residents regarding the non-payment of the debts due to British bondholders, and it is asserted that the British legation will be removed from Guatemala City to either Nicaragua or Salvador. The Christmas decorations were in red and green, and were striking in their profusion and beauty.

Mr. Rogers delivered a captivating address upon the subject of the birth and life of Christ, and held the closest

He recited the circumstances of "le birth of Christ in a concise and original way.

"Nineteen hundred years ago," he said, "there was born a baby in Bethlehem; nothing strange about that; but so poor was the mother of this baby that He was born in the place where the donkeys were kept, and put to sleep in the place from which the donkeys fed. History is sufficient to establish the fact that there was something unusual about this baby, and though born of such humble origin, his father but a carpenter, he did more for the world than any other man who ever lived. To my mind," continued Mr. Rogers, "one of the nearest followers that Christ has ever had in His mission of kindliness to His brother is the man who lives right here in Los Angeles. No man since the days of Christ has so fully and freely devoted his life to the uplifting of his fellowman as has Francis Murphy, and I have come here tonight chiefly to show an appreciation of fils unselfish devotion and unfailing kindliness to all mankind."

Solos were sung by Hugh and Stella Callender, and Mr. and Mrs. Baker, the blind singers, sang a touching goodnight song.
